BRIEF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

Hello there. Welcome to the introduction! I believe that you'll find writing books in Markdown much more satisfying than the alternatives, especially straight La-TeX. Which is awful. And isn't plaintext so nice? Isn't it readable as all getout? Yup!

A Section Break

Well, here's some more text I suppose. Blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah blah.

I wonder about quotes. "Do these work right?" How about 'single' quotes?

A Subsection Break

And let's go for a sub-sub-section next, shall we?

Holy Crap, It Worked

And now for a bit more text I suppose. You can also underline your headings, but that only gives you two levels. And with LaTeX and chapter titles, it only gives you one level!

1

THE ABSOLUTE BASICS

Yes, that's what we'll talk about in this chapter.

Let's Look at Some Code

Okay, here's an example in my own invented pseudo-code:

print "oh uh hello what okay"
if pie_crusts == amazing
    well_duh
else goto hell
```

Shall we talk about this snippet? No? Okay! We should at least test an inline `literal` value or two, right?

Now let's talk bulleted lists:

- This is an item
- This is another
- What about this one?

Bye bye!

Actually, let's get another code block in there just in case:

print "bloop"
print "blaap"
```

Yeah?

NOTE   This is a note.

This Section Will Have a Numbered List

Sound good? Here we go!

1. Some list item
2. Blah blah blah
3. Works great I guess

Okay, good.

2

ANOTHER CHAPTER?

Yes, it certainly is.
